SENATE FILIBUSTER AND HOUSE REVOLT THREATEN PROGRAM

Adjournment of Congress is Projected Into the Indefinite Future

CONFUSION INCREASED

Cotton and Sugar Blocs Are Fighting for Own Interests In the Confusion

By William K. Hutchinson
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—(INS)—A Senate filibuster against the anti-lynching bill and a House revolt against the wage-hour bill today upset the administration's program and projected adjournment of Congress into the indefinite future.

The under-cover activities of cotton and sugar blocs served to increase the confusion. The cotton bloc was fighting for government loans on this year's bumper crop, while the sugar bloc battled for extension of sugar stabilization legislation.

Administration leaders appeared indifferent to the situation. It was apparent they were willing to let the various factions battle until worn out and then make a last-minute effort to carry out the President's program.

All Senate activity was brought to a halt when Senator Wagner (D) of New York moved to call up the Van Nuys-Wagner anti-lynching bill. The opposition immediately began debating the motion, with a view to blocking a vote on it.

Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, denouncing the bill as unconstitutional, took the lead. He was supported by a group of Southerners who oppose the bill on sectional and constitutional grounds.

In the House, the usually administration-controlled rules committee refused to order consideration of the administration's wage-hour bill. It also declined to order consideration of the wheat crop insurance bill. This left administration leaders virtually without a program, as the new housing act is still in committee.

Nineteen Killed In Collapse of 3 Houses

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(INS)—Death toll in the collapse of three old houses at New Brighton, Staten Island, last night, rose to 19 today as weary police and firemen dragged additional bodies from the debris.

One person was missing and three others, one of whom was injured seriously, were taken to nearby hospitals.

Their foundations believed to have been undermined by the heavy rainfall which accompanied last night's severe electrical storm, the three frame dwellings, 50 years old, began to sag at 9.45 p. m. A minute later, before their occupants could be warned by neighbors, they crashed as though hit by a bomb, with the music of blaring radios turned into a requiem.

To Arm South America

(Copyrighted by I. N. S.)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12 — The United States plans to arm South America with a huge and formidable naval force as a warning and stop-gap against possible future old-world aggression in the Western world.

This, a high government official told International News Service today, is the real story behind the state department request for Congressional authority to lease six destroyers to Brazil.

The sensational move envisages the permanent establishment of a powerful fleet of 120 destroyers in Latin-American waters to guard the continent coast line. The fleet would remain in the United States possessions and could be recalled at will.

POSSIBLE FRACTURE

Dolores Binder, 1862 E. 14th street, Brooklyn, N. Y., while playing yesterday, fell off a couch. She has a possible fracture of the arm. Dolores was taken to Harriman Hospital.

INJURES HIP

Mrs. Pearl Tyrol, Tullytown, slipping at her home yesterday, injured her left hip. She was given treatment at Harriman Hospital.

STEPS ON NAIL

Charles Morgan, 337 Jackson street, stepped on a rusty nail yesterday. He had the injury attended to at Harriman Hospital.

Black Nominated For Supreme Court

Washington, D. C., Aug. 12—Senator Hugo Black, Democrat, of Alabama, one of the younger members of the Senate, and noted as a Liberal, was today nominated by President Roosevelt to fill the vacancy on the United States Supreme Court bench.

Black will succeed Willis Van-Devanter, who retired at the conclusion of the recent session of the Court, June 12th.

Black will be 51 years old on February 27th.

To Open Hearing On Sit-Down Strike

Philadelphia, Aug. 12 — Hearing of the petition of the Roberts & Manders Stove Company, and its subsidiary, Hatboro Foundry Company, for the eviction of 200 sit-down strikers from their plant at Hatboro, was to open before Judge Albert V. Maris, in U. S. District Court, here, this afternoon.

A fourth hearing was scheduled for yesterday afternoon, but Anthony Felix, Jr., one of the attorneys for the company, informed Judge Maris that the "parties" had agreed to the postponement. The case was continued until today to give the lawyers a chance for a further conference in plans for a settlement of the trouble. The sit-downers have had possession of the two plants since June 30th.

Three Powers To Consult

London, Aug. 12 — Great Britain is planning to consult the United States and France with a view to determining whether any "parallel actions" can be taken by the three powers to restrain Japan in North China, it was learned today.

A. & P. Haulers' Strike Ends

Philadelphia, Aug. 12—A major obstacle to peace was removed from Philadelphia's labor front today, when seven contractors hauling groceries for the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, signed closed shop contracts with the American Federation of Labor Teamsters Union.

The truck drivers employed by the haulers were to return to work today, carrying gains in wages, hours and working conditions. It was the walk-out of this group which precipitated the recent general truck strike.

SINK JUNKS IN EFFORT TO BOTTLE-UP RIVER

Defenders of Shanghai Making Frantic Attempts to Defend Rich Port

FOREIGNERS MOBILIZED

SHANGHAI, Aug. 12—A frantic attempt to bottle up the Whangpoo River by sinking junks in its shallow depths was made by defenders of Shanghai today, as open warfare between Japanese and Chinese forces in this rich port appeared inevitable.

Striving to emulate the feat of the late Richmond Pearson Hobson, who tried to tie up the harbor of Santiago by sinking a warship at the entrance in the Spanish-American War, the Chinese sank three steamers and scores of their flimsy junks in the river opposite the native city.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 12 — All foreign military detachments in Shanghai, including American soldiers, were hastily mobilized today as approach of open hostilities here were marked by a frantic attempt by the city's defenders to bottle up the Whangpoo River by sinking steamers and junks.

Warned Against Using Other Than Safety Glass

HARRISBURG, Aug. 12 — (INS) — The Department of Revenue today issued a warning to motor car repair shops against the use of anything but safety glass for replacement purposes.

The new Vehicle Code provides that safety glass be used for replacement purposes when installed in doors, windows or windshields of any vehicle operated on Pennsylvania highways.

The Department defined the phase "safety glass" to mean "any transparent product approved by the Department manufactured or fabricated in such a manner as substantially to prevent shattering and flying of glass when struck or broken."

START REBUILDING OF YARDLEY'S MAIN STREET

Long Controversy Between State and Borough Now At An End

ALMOST IMPASSABLE

YARDLEY, Aug. 12—Work has been started on the rebuilding of North Main street, under the direction of the local state highway officials. This marks the end of several years' controversy between the state and the borough council relative to whom the repair of the street belonged, during which time the road itself became almost impassable at times.

A year ago the state rebuilt the lower section of Main street from Afton avenue to the Reading Railroad, but at that time refused to continue on the Northern section. Negotiations continued, however, with the Yardley Lions Club and citizens of the community aiding the effort. Authorization of the work was obtained some time ago, followed by the beginning of the actual work on Monday.

The state highway department intends to completely rebuild the street as was done with the other section. This means that the road will be under construction for sometime, as the old road must be torn out, a new bed formed and foundation laid. Following the necessary ageing, an amesite top will be laid down.

At the present time the material removed from the road is being dumped on the Dolington Road, but it is understood that this road will also be repaired when the Main street has been completed.

TULLYTOWN WANTS BETTER TRAIN SERVICE

Decides To Petition P. R. R. Requesting Two Additional Trains Stop

POOR SUNDAY SERVICE

TULLYTOWN, Aug. 12—Borough council is going to petition the P. R. R. Co., for improved train service, asking that a train withdrawn be again placed on the schedule and that the service on Monday be improved.

At the meeting of Council Monday evening a motion was adopted to request the P. R. R. to again have train No. 25 stop at Tullytown and to also stop train No. 3866.

Last spring train No. 258 which passes through here shortly after nine o'clock, was discontinued. This left no train service, going east, from shortly after eight a. m., until about two p. m. On Sundays there is no trains stopping here, east bound, until nearly six o'clock p. m.

EDGELY MAN WRITES HOME ABOUT JAPAN-CHINA WAR

IS KEPT VERY BUSY

An Edgely boy, who enlisted in the U. S. Marines, three years ago, is having a busy time these days, being a member of the U. S. Embassy Guards at Peiping, China. The Edgelyite, Matthew M. Mannherz, son of Peter Mannherz, barber of Radcliffe street, Bristol, and who also conducts a shop at Edgely, writes home to his parents that he is kept very busy in a variety of activities.

Young Mannherz writes that actual war is raging seven miles outside of Peiping and that this causes an exceedingly large amount of work to be done by the Embassy Guards.

Mannherz enlisted about three years ago and still has about another year to serve. He likes the life of a Marine and judging from his letters thinks little or nothing of the close proximity of the war, between Japan and China.

TWO BRISTOL TROOPS AND EDGELY GROUP TO BE AT BUCCOU

Arrived in Camp Wednesday Afternoon For A Week's Stay

EACH TO HAVE STUNT

Will Participate In "Annual Buccou Camps Show" As Closing Program

Bristol Troop No. 1, Bristol Troop No. 3, and Edgely, are the Lower Bucks Troops that will be at Buccou Camps, the Bucks County Boy Scout Camp, for the last week of the 1937 Summer season. They arrived in camp on Wednesday afternoon. Each year, these troops pick the last week to be at Buccou for the now famous "Annual Buccou Camps Show" that is given for the entertainment of hundreds from Bucks County and from the countryside. Each of the troops will have a stunt, and there will be in addition the best stunts from the previous weekly stunt nights. It is a "good-will party" to the public, with no admission charge. Everyone is invited to attend.

The fourth week of camp was exciting with a Scout from Doylestown having been found to arrive at Buccou with scarlet fever on his second day in camp. Scout Executive William F. Livermore rushed his home, and the New Jersey State Health authorities quarantined the Waterfront Camp until Sunday. Besides the Doylestown troop, the troops not affected by the quarantine were Cornwells, Camp Lookout; Trevose, Mountain View; Southampton, Forest View; and Carversville, Handicrafters. A careful examination was given all of the "up-camp" troops on Saturday, and Doylestown was released on Sunday. No new cases had developed, and in the opinion of the camp physician, Dr. Barclay Fuhrman: "Everybody is in fine shape, and there seems to be no further illness."

Cornwells took the championships of volley ball, soft ball, and touch football. Darts was won by Trevose, and croquet by Southampton. Trevose was best in marching, and personal appearance. Neighborhood Commissioner William F. Amick was of exceptional help in all problems, having to conduct two separate programs. His jovial spirit and good fellowship was like a tonic to the entire camp. A number of junior leaders were directors of tournaments and activities. Giving this help were Junior Assistants Alvin Marshall, Jr., and Francis Borman, of Cornwells; and Robert MacFarland, of Trevose. Scout Leader of Southampton was Philip Waldron. Scouts from Cornwells were Frank Brown, Alex Deans, Joseph Dedrick, Carlton Dennis, James Daugherty, William Dunn, James Hutton, Paul Menzen, Herman Reif and Harold Turner, Jr. Harold Turner, Sr., chairman of the Cornwells Troop Committee, was with the troop during Friday and Saturday.

Directed by Buccou Commissioner Jesse Wendkos there was another fine record of advancement achieved during the third week. Commissioner Wendkos has always secured an excellent record when he has been at Buccou. For the past three years, the week he has been at Buccou has been the week of greatest attainment in advancement. Andaluusia Troop was highest with an average of 4.9 requirements per camper. This was accomplished through the passing of 23 merit badges and 31 first and second class requirements. Second was Morrisville with 4.2, and third Croydon with 4.0. Doylestown Troop No. 2 had an average of 3.1, Trevose 2.7 and Sellersville 2.6. A total of 104 merit badges and 185 requirements were attained.

A distinction was conferred on several leaders by their being selected to present the Scout Oath Tableau. "The Duties" were given by Field Commissioner Wendkos, Andalusia. "Service to Others" by Scoutmaster Hillborn Darlington, Jr., Doylestown. "Care of Self," Scoutmaster George Blosch, Andalusia.

It was the unanimous choice of the staff that Benjamin Larzelere, of Doylestown Troop No. 2, would be "The Outstanding Scout." In the presence of his mother the recognition was bestowed upon him. His cordial personality and willingness to be of all kinds of assistance were factors in his selection. Twelve other Scouts were selected as "Honor Scouts." They were: Edward Day and Frank Eyre, of Sellersville; Bradshaw Snipes and Oscar Fennimore, of Morrisville No. 1; George Scheffer and Elwood Rittenhouse, of Trevose; Wayne Vandegrift and Edward Helm, of Andalusia; Clinton Carr and Robert Schleicher, of Doylestown No. 2; and Robert Knight and John Welsh, Jr., of Croydon. William Frankovic of Morrisville, and Raymond Snyder of Croydon were presented with a Boy Scout First Aid kit for their alertness in "The Treasure Hunt."

The many years of devoted service to youth at Buccou Camps was the theme of the remarks by Scout Executive William F. Livermore during the Ceremonial. Following "the thrilling fire from the Heavens," the initiates into the Order of the Arrow, the National

SCANT VERSUS MINUS

News percolating through from Paris is calculated to worry the lemon pusses no end, which is good. The news has to do with what the sweet things will wear come fall.

The new raiment is now being displayed to American buyers—most Paris raiment goes to American buyers—and of course it is different. New raiment for females is always different, as this is good business. Perhaps to say this time it is different is putting it mildly.

One Paris expert sums it up like this: "Primarily clothes have become an index to the beauty and vitality of the body." Now this is an innovation that the average American male will want to see more of.

But let one reporter who has been making the rounds of Paris tell what's in store:

"Evening gowns were cut revealingly low in front or molded to the bust with startling frankness, but there were other surprises even more exotic in a show that had for its keynote:

"Away with all inhibitions.

"There were hats named 'Foolish Virgin' and 'Suppressed Desire,' and there were hats of felt shaped like high-heeled shoes, turned upside down and cocked over milady's ear.

"There were shoes that were actually worn as shoes—kid evening sandals tied on with wide ribbons that were carried up and up right to the knee.

"There were buttons that were shiny fiddles, birds and twinkling stars. And pockets were not pockets but inviting Cupid's bow lips of red, red tinsel embroidery.

"Colors were riotous. One coat collar of silver fox had pink eyes and a cunning ribbon tied about its neck. Other furs were dyed crimson red and prickly pear green, and there was a fur-trimmed glove in ten colors—a color for each finger.

"The day silhouette was kept straight and narrow for suits and dresses, but not as straight as one evening creation which fitted straight over the body like a tube."

Well, that seems to take in a lot of clothes territory, or leave a lot, and in the main it looks like a complete change of autumn scenery.

QUIET, PLEASE!

It seems that science, which has been able to find out all sorts of things, has discovered recently that the raucous, nerve-shattering horn is unnecessary as well as unpleasant.

Research has proved, indeed, that a double-note horn tuned to a major or minor third combines great carrying capacity, with absence of offence to the ear. Its use might well be standardized. The general noise of transport is hard to reduce but it is by the glaring offenders that the nerves are jarred, and the worst of these can and should be eliminated.

For all such favors as science may thus produce for a suffering mankind, said mankind should be grateful. If it now will find a way to put into effect this horn, it will be doubly grateful.

Hot weather tips by an Ohio health board suggest swimming and drinking copiously of water. In other words, swimming.

Don't forget the pencil, when setting off for the week-end by car, to take down the other driver's name.

In weather as variable as this, it may be three hours from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves.

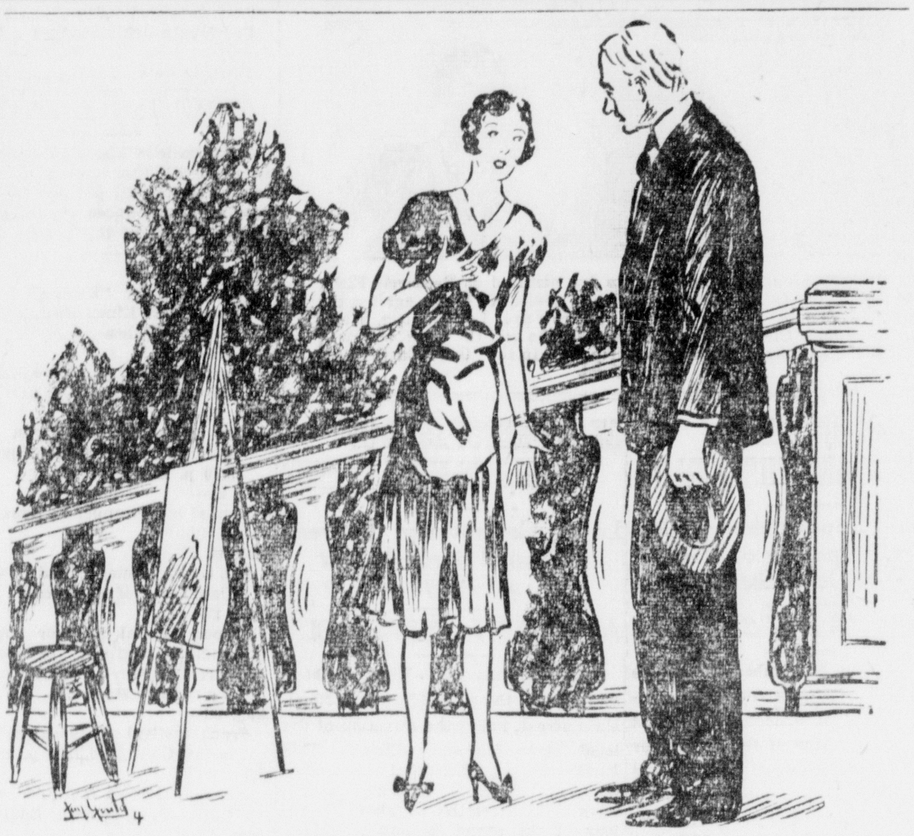
Leland Forbes had never met Jeanette Morse until they accidentally become acquainted in Virginia. They promptly fall in love with each other and plan an early marriage. In their short courtship Leland has not mentioned his sister, Lola, who is his twin and the only other one of his family left. She has a baby boy and is married to Vance Harlow, a worthless brute. She suddenly comes to Leland a few days before his planned marriage, begging him to hide her as she has killed her husband. With no witnesses and knowing that her husband's relatives who hated her would perjure themselves to send her to the chair, Leland writes a mysterious farewell note to Jeanette and hides with his sister in the Blue Ridge mountains. Jeanette still has faith in him. On day a man who is evidently a detective rides up to the door of their little house in the woods. Leland tells his sister to hide while he goes out to face the man.



"Mr. Adams," Jeanette said, imploringly, "you must tell me where Leland is."

CHAPTER IV.

The stranger looked keenly at Leland as he stepped out of the door and closed it behind him. Then he grinned.

Leland did not miss the grin. The man felt rather sure of himself, Leland decided.

"Well," he said, "you're not a native—that's plain."

In a flash Leland had his tip-off as to what to do.

"Howdy," Leland said, "what mought yore business be, stranger?"

The man stared at him in amazement.

"What's that?" hhe demanded sharply.

Leland realized that the man was surprised and puzzled at this.

"Who air you-all and what you-all want?" Leland demanded, with the nasal twang of the mountaineers. "We don't set no store by furriners down in these yere parts."

The well-dressed sttranger eyed Leland keenly, from head to foot.

"No offense," he said.

"What is hit you-all seeks?" Leland persisted, getting courage now at the success of his ruse and scowling at the man.

"I'm merely prospecting for coal—no offense meant," he declared.

"No coal here, hit's yonder, up Radford way, seventy mile from this yere valley."

Leland did not believe the man's story that he was prospecting for coal, not only because he had all the ear-marks of a detective, but because he should have known that the nearest coal was either at Radford or Ivanoe Furnace, towns seventy-five miles apart and equally as far from Grayson Hills.

"Sorry," the man said and he swung up into his saddle and rode away.

Leland went inside and told his sister to keep hidden as he was going to tell Harvey Orson. He cut up through the woods and told him about it.

"I think he's a revenuer and I wanted to warn you, and anyway you know I don't want strangers down here."

"I'll be right pert in seein' about it, Mister Fo'bes," Harvey Orson promised. Leland smiled grimly. Whoever the man was, Orson and his neighbors would soon send him on his way. If the man was a detective his badge would work him more harm than good for to these people a badge is the sign of but one thing, a revenue officer—and a revenue officer in those parts held down a very unhealthy job.

Lola was almost sick over the fright. To her there still lurked the grim shadow of the electric chair. The fear of capture had never quite left her.

Leland's mind was often in a turmoil. He would have spells of thinking of Jeanette, of trying to plan some means of letting her know that he was alive and loved her, but no plan would come to him that didn't carry with it too great a degree of danger, according to his views.

Much as he longed to secure copies of newspapers that carried the story of the shooting of Vance Harlow, he never dared to send for them or even to ask his friend and lawyer to do that, for he didn't want him to suspect that his sister was with him.

Poor Jeanette! When proofs of the material that Leland had sent, in his roundabout way, to the Maxin & Company house were given to her to illustrate, she always had a day or so of suffering, mental agony. These proofs meant that somewhere Leland was alive, and there was something direful in his hiding. But Jeanette was no fictional heroine to faint and droop and pine away. She finally went on with her work.

When the first volume came to Leland—the first since he had gone into hiding and had used the pen name of Paul Justin—his sister saw that he was in great distress.

She did not suspect that it was over the handsome illustrations because he knew that Jeanette had made them. She thought it was because he had to use a false name on his work.

"Leland, I'm miserable over your sacrifice," she told him, one day. "I cannot let it go on."

"Everything is serene. When Sunny is about five we'll get out of here and settle in some little Italian town, don't worry," he would say.

"But it is all because I was such a blind fool. I knew that you never liked—the man I married. I knew when you warned me, that you were sincere, but I was in love—or I thought that I was and because I let my heart run away with my head I have ruined my life and yours."

"Hush, there is no question of my duty to my sister. We all err at times—I'll see you through," he would scold at her in his mild way.

He would have been surprised and miserable if he had known of the many nights she wept because of this thing—and not a tear was for the dead Vance Harlow. To her the tragedy was that she had ruined her beloved brother's career and had upon her soul the horrible knowledge that she had killed her son's father.

What if little Leland should learn the truth in after years? He would never quite know the circumstances.

She talked to Leland about this now and then, making sure that the little boy was asleep, for he was beginning to understand words and even at this tender age something might cling to his memory.

Over and over, with great patience, for he knew how she was suffering, Leland pointed out to his sister that once in Italy they would adopt new names and the little boy would never know.

Jeanette, miserable yet brave, again went down to Wytheville and out to the beautiful home that belonged to Leland. Old black Mose and Violet welcomed her.

She remained there for weeks, making photographs of birds and also making her colored drawings for the colored book plates. Day after day she would go over some of the territory where she and Leland had wandered, and she had to fight to keep from running away. She stayed on, telling herself that it was because of the abundance of birds for her to photograph, but in reality it was because she had a constant hope that some day Leland would come back—back here to this little home he loved so well.

And if he did come, she told herself, she would go to him and comfort him and never ask him a question.

One day a clean-cut appearing man drove up to the place in an expensive car. Jeanette was on the west porch, her easel set up, busily at work coloring some drawings of birds. These had to be rushed up to the publishing house.

Old Mose went down to see him as he came up the walk. He caught sight of Jeanette and, hat in hand, he approached her.

"Are you Miss Morse?" he asked.

"Why yes—how did you know? You—you must know something of Leland—of Mr. Forbes!"

Jeanette's heart beat rapidly.

"Yes, I know him."

"I have every right to know about him—where is he? I knew that if you knew my name you knew him."

"I do not know where he is, Miss Morse. I—I used to be his lawyer. I was driving through and decided to come and question the colored people who are the keepers."

He handed her his card.

"Mr. Adams," Jeanette said, imploringly, "you must tell me where Leland is. It doesn't matter what he has done, I must go to him. I can help him. I have implicit faith in him."

"I cannot tell you—I am searching for him myself."

Adams was doing what he thought was right, following orders, but he was secretly sorry and also angry at Leland for forcing him into this situation.

Jeanette did not know whether to believe him or not, but she decided that it would be useless to let him think that she distrusted him.

Adams remained over night. He went through some of Leland's papers. This was necessary in the handling of Leland's affairs. It made Jeanette more suspicious than ever.

"Well," he said, the next afternoon, as he prepared to leave, "I have been through everything, I know no more about it now than I did before."

Jeanette was convinced then that Adams was telling the truth, and was there solely to look for clues as to Leland's whereabouts.

But after he had gone she found, in the library, a great folio that had been taken down and left open. It was open at a map of Grayson County, a county that adjoins Wythe County.

Why had this lawyer been studying the map of the adjoining county?

Could it mean anything?

Jeanette began to make veiled inquiries about Grayson County whenever she was in the town shopping or at the post office mailing her material.

Williams, the station master at the railroad station, told her considerable about Grayson County.

"It's mostly hills and woods and mountaineers, Miss," he said. "They make the best moonshine in the state up there and they can hide out so's no revenuer can git 'em. They come into town often, especially in the Fall, selling a bag of chestnuts for five dollars and inside the chestnuts is a gallon of fine moonshine."

Jeanette was unusually interested. If the Grayson Hills in Grayson County provided a perfect hiding place for moonshiners, why not for Leland?

She knew that he was acquainted all through this district. When they had been up at Chimney Rocks, that memorable day Leland proposed, he had pointed out the heavily wooded, deep-valleyed Grayson Hills and told her of his friends there, the mountaineers.

There was, she learned, a prosperous farmer, a Dutchman, near the station of Crocketts. His name was Baumgartener. He had a sort of public inn in connection with his farm.

Jeanette decided that there was nothing to lose in making a try. She could always be photographing birds and keeping on with her work. She packed her little car with many supplies and drove up to Crocketts. She found the farm and was taken in and given a rather good room.

Day after day she drove her little light car here and there into the mountain roads. Several times she was lost or belated and the mountaineers would put her up.

But they never said a word to her of knowing a man who wrote about birds, or that such a man was hiding there, although she always explained that she was photographing birds.

At one place an old crone by the fireplace, smoking her pipe, upon being told that the girl was "takin' pitchers of chickadee birds" showed interest.

"You-all furriners set a store on birds, I take it," she said.

"Why?" Jeanette asked quickly and she caught the younger woman nudging the old crone.

She could get no more information but she became hopeful.

Often she would ask, "I suppose plenty of strangers come here to study the song birds?"

She even asked Harvey Orson's wife this question. The woman shook her head.

"Never heered of hit," she asserted, loyally.

One day Jeanette got to the top of a wooded knoll and her car could get no further. She took her camera and walked down a trail to a small house.

A baby boy was todding about inside a little yard. And then a man came out of the house. Jeanette stared at him.

"Leland!" she cried.

He had just lifted the baby out of the little yard. He wheeled and stared at Jeanette and almost dropped the baby. Lola had followed him out and saw Jeanette.

"Take Leland," he said, handing over the baby to Lola.

"'Ook, mama, 'ook!" the youngster cried, pointing at Jeanette. A stranger was a curiosity to him.

"Mama? Leland? Is she—" Jeanette hesitated.

In a flash Lola felt that this girl had some claim on her brother, she saw it in his eyes, in the face of Jeanette.

"No, no," Lola said, excitedly and eager to explain, "we are not married!"

"Hush, Lola," Leland said and started toward Jeanette.

But after one gasp at Lola's words she turned and ran.

Leland hurried after her but she raced over the knoll, got into her car, turned it and drove away before he could overtake her. His pleading shouts for her to wait only spurred her to make more speed.

To Be Continued.

Rapid Progress in Air-Conditioning Field

These hot midsummer days and nights have caused more than one individual to wonder how far off is the day when the average home will be air-conditioned, making it possible to live as comfortably in summer as in winter. Despite the fact that 50 per cent more air-conditioning equipment will be sold in 1937 than last year, investigation into the situation is not encouraging. Two chief obstacles in the way of universal air-conditioning are the expense and the amount of water needed for cooling systems. Cities would have to increase their water supply several times over if air-conditioning were much more widespread. And the cost of original apparatus, at the present time, runs about $2,000 per home and operating expenses range from $25 to $50 a month. But rapid strides are being made in respect to improving equipment and lowering costs and the day should not be far off when "home made weather" will be a common reality for the better class of homes as well as offices and stores.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly
(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Movie clothes as a rule show what the well-dressed woman should strive to achieve in clothes. Quite often, however, a character actress will be featured who, more than likely, points out to the type of person she is representing on the screen what not to wear. And it's a smart woman who selects her type of actress and studies her carefully each time, but a smarter woman who knows when that actress is burlesquing, even to costume, and when she is not.

Let's take, for example, Comedienne Louise Fazenda, who usually has her audience rolling in the aisles. In real life Louise is a well-dressed woman. On the screen she's not exactly that. Usually the make-up department pads Louise to make her even more comical . . . her hips are given a couple of inches on either side for her role in "First Lady." In this picture Louise impersonates a type of woman we all know. But if the audience bears in mind that in this role Louise definitely represents a woman who is not well-dressed then everything is fine. So often, however, a fan will admire an actress so much that she will copy her dress regardless.

A woman who knows how to dress well knows that horizontal stripes, puffed sleeves, high necklines, loud colors and perky hats do not look well or add to the attractiveness of the matronly figure. Alice Brady is another grand comedienne who sometimes is extremely well-dressed for a role, while other times her role calls for her to dress like a silly woman trying to look sixteen.

Much is written about clothes for the slim young thing, but not enough on the subject of how a woman past the 35 mark should dress. When a girl is sixteen she yearns to be grown-up and consequently wants to wear satins and sequins. Then when she gets up to twenty-eight and thirty she begins to dread the years and consequently tries to dress in frilly organdies and frothy chiffons. A smart woman will dress her years, and in doing so will achieve a charm and air that is ageless.

Spring Byington and Dorothy Peterson are two women who usually play the roles of the average Mrs. America. In the picture "It's Love I'm After," which stars Bette Davis, Leslie Howard and Olivia de Havilland, the mother role is played by Miss Byington, and her wardrobe is the thing for the age character she plays.

BERRY UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

One and one-half cups flour, one-fourth cup sugar, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, three tablespoons shortening, one beaten egg, two-thirds cup milk.

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub shortening into dry ingredients. Add beaten egg and milk, stirring until flour is well moistened.

Prepare a nine-inch cake pan with this mixture: One and one-half tablespoons butter, three tablespoons sugar, one and one-half cups fresh red or black raspberries.

Melt the butter in the pan, tilting so that the entire bottom is coated. Sprinkle the sugar evenly over the butter and then cover with the raspberries. Spread the batter evenly over the raspberries and bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 25 minutes. Serve hot.

SCANT VERSUS MINUS

News percolating through from Paris is calculated to worry the lemon pusses no end, which is good. The news has to do with what the sweet things will wear come fall.

The new raiment is now being displayed to American buyers—most Paris raiment goes to American buyers—and of course it is different. New raiment for females is always different, as this is good business. Perhaps to say this time it is different is putting it mildly.

One Paris expert sums it up like this: "Primarily clothes have become an index to the beauty and vitality of the body." Now this is an innovation that the average American male will want to see more of.

But let one reporter who has been making the rounds of Paris tell what's in store:

"Evening gowns were cut revealingly low in front or molded to the bust with startling frankness, but there were other surprises even more exotic in a show that had for its keynote:

"Away with all inhibitions.

"There were hats named 'Foolish Virgin' and 'Suppressed Desire,' and there were hats of felt shaped like high-heeled shoes, turned upside down and cocked over milady's ear.

"There were shoes that were actually worn as shoes—kid evening sandals tied on with wide ribbons that were carried up and up right to the knee.

"There were buttons that were shiny fiddles, birds and twinkling stars. And pockets were not pockets but inviting Cupid's bow lips of red, red tinsel embroidery.

"Colors were riotous. One coat collar of silver fox had pink eyes and a cunning ribbon tied about its neck. Other furs were dyed crimson red and prickly pear green, and there was a fur-trimmed glove in ten colors—a color for each finger.

"The day silhouette was kept straight and narrow for suits and dresses, but not as straight as one evening creation which fitted straight over the body like a tube."

Well, that seems to take in a lot of clothes territory, or leave a lot, and in the main it looks like a complete change of autumn scenery.

QUIET, PLEASE!

It seems that science, which has been able to find out all sorts of things, has discovered recently that the raucous, nerve-shattering horn is unnecessary as well as unpleasant.

Research has proved, indeed, that a double-note horn tuned to a major or minor third combines great carrying capacity, with absence of offence to the ear. Its use might well be standardized. The general noise of transport is hard to reduce but it is by the glaring offenders that the nerves are jarred, and the worst of these can and should be eliminated.

For all such favors as science may thus produce for a suffering mankind, said mankind should be grateful. If it now will find a way to put into effect this horn, it will be doubly grateful.

Hot weather tips by an Ohio health board suggest swimming and drinking copiously of water. In other words, swimming.

Don't forget the pencil, when setting off for the week-end by car, to take down the other driver's name.

In weather as variable as this, it may be three hours from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves.

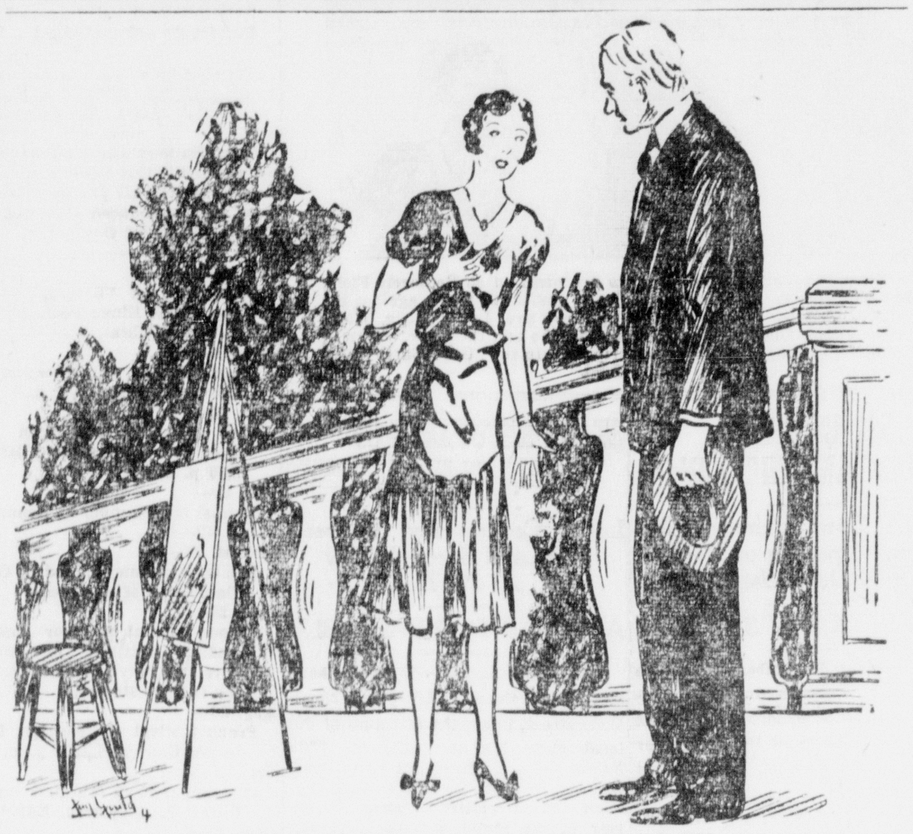
"More Than Love"

by LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

COPYRIGHT 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Leland Forbes had never met Jeanette Morse until they accidentally become acquainted in Virginia. They promptly fall in love with each other and plan an early marriage. In their short courtship Leland has not mentioned his sister, Lola, who is his twin and the only other one of his family left. She has a baby boy and is married to Vance Harlow, a worthless brute. She suddenly comes to Leland a few days before his planned marriage, begging him to hide her as she has killed her husband. With no witnesses and knowing that her husband's relatives who hated her would perjure themselves to send her to the chair, Leland writes a mysterious farewell note to Jeanette and hides with his sister in the Blue Ridge mountains. Jeanette still has faith in him. On day a man who is evidently a detective rides up to the door of their little house in the woods. Leland tells his sister to hide while he goes out to face the man.



"Mr. Adams," Jeanette said, imploringly, "you must tell me where Leland is."

CHAPTER IV.

The stranger looked keenly at Leland as he stepped out of the door and closed it behind him. Then he grinned.

Leland did not miss the grin. The man felt rather sure of himself, Leland decided.

"Well," he said, "you're not a native—that's plain."

In a flash Leland had his tip-off as to what to do.

"Howdy," Leland said, "what mought yore business be, stranger?"

The man stared at him in amazement.

"What's that?" hhe demanded sharply.

Leland realized that the man was surprised and puzzled at this.

"Who air you-all and what you-all want?" Leland demanded, with the nasal twang of the mountaineers. "We don't set no store by furriners down in these yere parts."

The well-dressed sttranger eyed Leland keenly, from head to foot.

"No offense," he said.

"What is hit you-all seeks?" Leland persisted, getting courage now at the success of his ruse and scowling at the man.

"I'm merely prospecting for coal—no offense meant," he declared.

"No coal here, hit's yonder, up Radford way, seventy mile from this yere valley."

Leland did not believe the man's story that he was prospecting for coal, not only because he had all the ear-marks of a detective, but because he should have known that the nearest coal was either at Radford or Ivanoe Furnace, towns seventy-five miles apart and equally as far from Grayson Hills.

"Sorry," the man said and he swung up into his saddle and rode away.

Leland went inside and told his sister to keep hidden as he was going to tell Harvey Orson. He cut up through the woods and told him about it.

"I think he's a revenuer and I wanted to warn you, and anyway you know I don't want strangers down here."

"I'll be right pert in seein' about it, Mister Fo'bes," Harvey Orson promised. Leland smiled grimly. Whoever the man was, Orson and his neighbors would soon send him on his way. If the man was a detective his badge would work him more harm than good for to these people a badge is the sign of but one thing, a revenue officer—and a revenue officer in those parts held down a very unhealthy job.

Lola was almost sick over the fright. To her there still lurked the grim shadow of the electric chair. The fear of capture had never quite left her.

Leland's mind was often in a turmoil. He would have spells of thinking of Jeanette, of trying to plan some means of letting her know that he was alive and loved her, but no plan would come to him that didn't carry with it too great a degree of danger, according to his views.

Much as he longed to secure copies of newspapers that carried the story of the shooting of Vance Harlow, he never dared to send for them or even to ask his friend and lawyer to do that, for he didn't want him to suspect that his sister was with him.

Poor Jeanette! When proofs of the material that Leland had sent, in his roundabout way, to the Maxin & Company house were given to her to illustrate, she always had a day or so of suffering, mental agony. These proofs meant that somewhere Leland was alive, and there was something direful in his hiding. But Jeanette was no fictional heroine to faint and droop and pine away. She finally went on with her work.

When the first volume came to Leland—the first since he had gone into hiding and had used the pen name of Paul Justin—his sister saw that he was in great distress.

She did not suspect that it was over the handsome illustrations because he knew that Jeanette had made them. She thought it was because he had to use a false name on his work.

"Leland, I'm miserable over your sacrifice," she told him, one day. "I cannot let it go on."

"Everything is serene. When Sunny is about five we'll get out of here and settle in some little Italian town, don't worry," he would say.

"But it is all because I was such a blind fool. I knew that you never liked—the man I married. I knew when you warned me, that you were sincere, but I was in love—or I thought that I was and because I let my heart run away with my head I have ruined my life and yours."

"Hush, there is no question of my duty to my sister. We all err at times—I'll see you through," he would scold at her in his mild way.

He would have been surprised and miserable if he had known of the many nights she wept because of this thing—and not a tear was for the dead Vance Harlow. To her the tragedy was that she had ruined her beloved brother's career and had upon her soul the horrible knowledge that she had killed her son's father.

What if little Leland should learn the truth in after years? He would never quite know the circumstances.

She talked to Leland about this now and then, making sure that the little boy was asleep, for he was beginning to understand words and even at this tender age something might cling to his memory.

Over and over, with great patience, for he knew how she was suffering, Leland pointed out to his sister that once in Italy they would adopt new names and the little boy would never know.

Jeanette, miserable yet brave, again went down to Wytheville and out to the beautiful home that belonged to Leland. Old black Mose and Violet welcomed her.

She remained there for weeks, making photographs of birds and also making her colored drawings for the colored book plates. Day after day she would go over some of the territory where she and Leland had wandered, and she had to fight to keep from running away. She stayed on, telling herself that it was because of the abundance of birds for her to photograph, but in reality it was because she had a constant hope that some day Leland would come back—back here to this little home he loved so well.

And if he did come, she told herself, she would go to him and comfort him and never ask him a question.

One day a clean-cut appearing man drove up to the place in an expensive car. Jeanette was on the west porch, her easel set up, busily at work coloring some drawings of birds. These had to be rushed up to the publishing house.

Old Mose went down to see him as he came up the walk. He caught sight of Jeanette and, hat in hand, he approached her.

"Are you Miss Morse?" he asked.

"Why yes—how did you know? You—you must know something of Leland—of Mr. Forbes!"

Jeanette's heart beat rapidly.

"Yes, I know him."

"I have every right to know about him—where is he? I knew that if you knew my name you knew him."

"I do not know where he is, Miss Morse. I—I used to be his lawyer. I was driving through and decided to come and question the colored people who are the keepers."

He handed her his card.

"Mr. Adams," Jeanette said, imploringly, "you must tell me where Leland is. It doesn't matter what he has done, I must go to him. I can help him. I have implicit faith in him."

"I cannot tell you—I am searching for him myself."

Adams was doing what he thought was right, following orders, but he was secretly sorry and also angry at Leland for forcing him into this situation.

Jeanette did not know whether to believe him or not, but she decided that it would be useless to let him think that she distrusted him.

Adams remained over night. He went through some of Leland's papers. This was necessary in the handling of Leland's affairs. It made Jeanette more suspicious than ever.

"Well," he said, the next afternoon, as he prepared to leave, "I have been through everything, I know no more about it now than I did before."

Jeanette was convinced then that Adams was telling the truth, and was there solely to look for clues as to Leland's whereabouts.

But after he had gone she found, in the library, a great folio that had been taken down and left open. It was open at a map of Grayson County, a county that adjoins Wythe County.

Why had this lawyer been studying the map of the adjoining county?

Could it mean anything?

Jeanette began to make veiled inquiries about Grayson County whenever she was in the town shopping or at the post office mailing her material.

Williams, the station master at the railroad station, told her considerable about Grayson County.

"It's mostly hills and woods and mountaineers, Miss," he said. "They make the best moonshine in the state up there and they can hide out so's no revenuer can git 'em. They come into town often, especially in the Fall, selling a bag of chestnuts for five dollars and inside the chestnuts is a gallon of fine moonshine."

Jeanette was unusually interested. If the Grayson Hills in Grayson County provided a perfect hiding place for moonshiners, why not for Leland?

She knew that he was acquainted all through this district. When they had been up at Chimney Rocks, that memorable day Leland proposed, he had pointed out the heavily wooded, deep-valleyed Grayson Hills and told her of his friends there, the mountaineers.

There was, she learned, a prosperous farmer, a Dutchman, near the station of Crocketts. His name was Baumgartener. He had a sort of public inn in connection with his farm.

Jeanette decided that there was nothing to lose in making a try. She could always be photographing birds and keeping on with her work. She packed her little car with many supplies and drove up to Crocketts. She found the farm and was taken in and given a rather good room.

Day after day she drove her little light car here and there into the mountain roads. Several times she was lost or belated and the mountaineers would put her up.

But they never said a word to her of knowing a man who wrote about birds, or that such a man was hiding there, although she always explained that she was photographing birds.

At one place an old crone by the fireplace, smoking her pipe, upon being told that the girl was "takin' pitchers of chickadee birds" showed interest.

"You-all furriners set a store on birds, I take it," she said.

"Why?" Jeanette asked quickly and she caught the younger woman nudging the old crone.

She could get no more information but she became hopeful.

Often she would ask, "I suppose plenty of strangers come here to study the song birds?"

She even asked Harvey Orson's wife this question. The woman shook her head.

"Never heered of hit," she asserted, loyally.

One day Jeanette got to the top of a wooded knoll and her car could get no further. She took her camera and walked down a trail to a small house.

A baby boy was todding about inside a little yard. And then a man came out of the house. Jeanette stared at him.

"Leland!" she cried.

He had just lifted the baby out of the little yard. He wheeled and stared at Jeanette and almost dropped the baby. Lola had followed him out and saw Jeanette.

"Take Leland," he said, handing over the baby to Lola.

"'Ook, mama, 'ook!" the youngster cried, pointing at Jeanette. A stranger was a curiosity to him.

"Mama? Leland? Is she—" Jeanette hesitated.

In a flash Lola felt that this girl had some claim on her brother, she saw it in his eyes, in the face of Jeanette.

"No, no," Lola said, excitedly and eager to explain, "we are not married!"

"Hush, Lola," Leland said and started toward Jeanette.

But after one gasp at Lola's words she turned and ran.

Leland hurried after her but she raced over the knoll, got into her car, turned it and drove away before he could overtake her. His pleading shouts for her to wait only spurred her to make more speed.

To Be Continued.

Rapid Progress in Air-Conditioning Field

These hot midsummer days and nights have caused more than one individual to wonder how far off is the day when the average home will be air-conditioned, making it possible to live as comfortably in summer as in winter. Despite the fact that 50 per cent more air-conditioning equipment will be sold in 1937 than last year, investigation into the situation is not encouraging. Two chief obstacles in the way of universal air-conditioning are the expense and the amount of water needed for cooling systems. Cities would have to increase their water supply several times over if air-conditioning were much more widespread. And the cost of original apparatus, at the present time, runs about $2,000 per home and operating expenses range from $25 to $50 a month. But rapid strides are being made in respect to improving equipment and lowering costs and the day should not be far off when "home made weather" will be a common reality for the better class of homes as well as offices and stores.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly
(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Movie clothes as a rule show what the well-dressed woman should strive to achieve in clothes. Quite often, however, a character actress will be featured who, more than likely, points out to the type of person she is representing on the screen what not to wear. And it's a smart woman who selects her type of actress and studies her carefully each time, but a smarter woman who knows when that actress is burlesquing, even to costume, and when she is not.

Let's take, for example, Comedienne Louise Fazenda, who usually has her audience rolling in the aisles. In real life Louise is a well-dressed woman. On the screen she's not exactly that. Usually the make-up department pads Louise to make her even more comical . . . her hips are given a couple of inches on either side for her role in "First Lady." In this picture Louise impersonates a type of woman we all know. But if the audience bears in mind that in this role Louise definitely represents a woman who is not well-dressed then everything is fine. So often, however, a fan will admire an actress so much that she will copy her dress regardless.

A woman who knows how to dress well knows that horizontal stripes, puffed sleeves, high necklines, loud colors and perky hats do not look well or add to the attractiveness of the matronly figure. Alice Brady is another grand comedienne who sometimes is extremely well-dressed for a role, while other times her role calls for her to dress like a silly woman trying to look sixteen.

Much is written about clothes for the slim young thing, but not enough on the subject of how a woman past the 35 mark should dress. When a girl is sixteen she yearns to be grown-up and consequently wants to wear satins and sequins. Then when she gets up to twenty-eight and thirty she begins to dread the years and consequently tries to dress in frilly organdies and frothy chiffons. A smart woman will dress her years, and in doing so will achieve a charm and air that is ageless.

Spring Byington and Dorothy Peterson are two women who usually play the roles of the average Mrs. America. In the picture "It's Love I'm After," which stars Bette Davis, Leslie Howard and Olivia de Havilland, the mother role is played by Miss Byington, and her wardrobe is the thing for the age character she plays.

BERRY UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

One and one-half cups flour, one-fourth cup sugar, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, three tablespoons shortening, one beaten egg, two-thirds cup milk.

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub shortening into dry ingredients. Add beaten egg and milk, stirring until flour is well moistened.

Prepare a nine-inch cake pan with this mixture: One and one-half tablespoons butter, three tablespoons sugar, one and one-half cups fresh red or black raspberries.

Melt the butter in the pan, tilting so that the entire bottom is coated. Sprinkle the sugar evenly over the butter and then cover with the raspberries. Spread the batter evenly over the raspberries and bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 25 minutes. Serve hot.

HOT-WEATHER SPECIAL

for Health and Fitness

1 When you see members of your family looking tired and "down-in-the-mouth"—unable to meet the added drag of hot days—the cause may be constipation.

2 The most common type of constipation is due to meals that lack sufficient "bulk." Try serving Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily and see how quickly the condition is relieved.

3 Send him off to the office with a spring in his stride—ready to lick the day's job—no matter how hot the weather. Serve Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity

RIGHT NOW, grocers are featuring a special that may help you face these hot, humid days without discomfort!

Common constipation makes the heat of summer twice as hard to bear. To keep well and energetic when it's 90° in the shade, you need to be fit inside as well as out. Get a package of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN from your grocer and serve this laxative food regularly for regularity.

In addition to "bulk," ALL-BRAN supplies vitamin B to tone up the intestines, and iron for the blood. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Serve as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook into recipes. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

CRUMB CAKE

There is nothing more delicious than homemade crumb cake, made from a rich yeast dough. One of the secrets of a light crumb cake is to allow the dough to rise a second time in the cake pan.

A mixture of butter, flour and sugar is spread over the top before baking. This may be varied with a sifting of cinnamon, or finely chopped nuts—raisins or currants might also be added. Sometimes a rich muffin mixture treated in the same way is called by the same name.

Two cakes compressed yeast; one cup milk, scalded and cooled to lukewarm; one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, four egg yolks, four cups flour, one-half cup melted shortening.

Crumble yeast into a bowl. Add milk and stir to dissolve the yeast. Add sugar, salt, beaten egg yolks and flour. Mix and add melted shortening and mix well. Turn out on floured board, knead two or three minutes until the dough is smooth and put into a bowl.

Cover and let rise over hot (not boiling) water, until double in bulk. Divide dough into two portions and pat into greased cake pans. Sprinkle with a mixture made by rubbing together two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons flour and one-quarter cup sugar.

Let rise until double in bulk over hot (not boiling) water and then bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees F., about 30 minutes.

EASY-TO-MAKE COOKIES FOR SUMMER

Brownies

One-half cup shortening, one cup sugar, one-half cup flour, two eggs, unbeaten; two squares bitter chocolate, melted; one cup chopped walnuts.

Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly. Add eggs, one at a time. Stir well, then add other ingredients. Put in a shallow, greased pan, about seven by eleven inches. Bake from 20 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F. Cut in oblongs 1½ by 2 inches. One-half pound walnuts in the shell should make one cup nut meats.

Filled Graham Cookies

Three tablespoons sugar, two teaspoons baking powder, two and one-half cups graham flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one cup cream, one-half pound dates or figs, chopped.

Sift together sugar, salt and baking powder. Add cream and graham flour. Mix well and chill in refrigerator until ready to use. Roll out half the dough on a floured board. Sprinkle with chopped dates or figs. Roll out the rest of the dough and place it over the fruit. Cut with a cookie cutter and bake on oiled baking sheet in moderate oven, 375 degrees F., 12 to 15 minutes. Finely chopped nuts could be sprinkled over each cookie before baking.

Another method is to roll out half the dough, spread with chopped fruit and cover with the rest of the dough. Roll up like a jelly roll, pressing the edges together and slice thin with a very sharp knife. This unusual recipe makes five or six dozen cookies.

MARSHMALLOW MERINGUE

Eight marshmallows, one-fourth teaspoon vanilla, one-sixth cup granulated sugar, one and one-half teaspoons milk, one egg white, salt.

Heat marshmallows with milk in a saucepan over low gas flame, folding over and over until marshmallows are about half melted. Remove from heat and continue folding until marshmallows are melted and have a smooth fluffy texture. Cool. Add salt and vanilla to egg white. Beat until egg white begins to stand in peaks, then add sugar slowly, beating until meringue stiffens. Fold meringue into melted marshmallows, combining lightly with a spoon.

This meringue recipe is a good one to file, since it may be made up several hours in advance and stored in the refrigerator until ready to serve. Heap meringue on tarts and brown under broiler not more than one minute. This meringue is delicious with many kinds of pudding, too.

DATE DAINTIES

Two eggs, three-fourths cup powdered sugar, three tablespoons flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one cup chopped walnuts, one cup pitted and chopped dates, one teaspoon vanilla, few drops orange flavoring.

Beat the eggs until they are light. Sift the flour, salt and baking powder together, mix with the sugar and stir into the eggs. Add the dates, nuts and flavorings. Spread in a shallow buttered pan about eight by ten inches. Bake in a moderate oven at 350 degrees, for about 25 minutes. Cut in strips and cool before serving.

IT PAYS

TO READ THE ADVERTISEMENTS IN THE

BRISTOL COURIER

First, because it is lower Bucks County's only daily newspaper.

Second, because Bristol is Bucks County's biggest market.

Third, because the makers and merchants who advertise in the Courier stake their reputations, in cold black type, that what you read is true. That is why each article they sell you must be so thoroughly satisfactory that you would later answer "yes" to this, the most important question a merchant can ask a customer: "Would you buy it again?"

Fourth, because the Courier daily goes into 3500 homes in this section, where it is read and re-read for its advertisements and news.

. . . AND TO THE ADVERTISER . . .

The Courier offers a concentrated coverage of lower Bucks County. The Courier boasts a substantial increase in circulation. The Courier is relied upon in the homes of Bristol and vicinity for its news and shopping guidance. A small advertisement at little cost will bring big results.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

By ANN PAGE

VEGETABLES and fruits are both plentiful and comparatively low in price. Other good values are to be found in butter, cheese and eggs. Fish prices, too, are reasonable.

All meats are high with pork at the top, beef and veal intermediate and lamb the best value available. Ducklings are now the most attractive buy in the poultry market.

Peaches, pears and plums are in full season. Apples are again plentiful together with melons, huckleberries, nectarines and lemons. Corn and lima beans, potatoes and tomatoes are the outstanding vegetables now in market.

The following menus call for seasonable and reasonable foods.

Low Cost Dinner

Braised Lamb Shanks — Potatoes
Creamed Carrots and Peas
Bread and Butter
New Apple Pie
Tea or Coffee — Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Duckling — Sweet Potatoes
Baked Stuffed Tomatoes
Bread and Butter
Fruit Compote — Cookies
Tea or Coffee — Milk

Very Special Dinner

Fruit Cup
Roast Lamb — Browned Potatoes
Succotash
Combination Salad
Bread and Butter
Deep Fruit Pie — Cheese
Coffee

SUMMER SCHOOLS SET NEW ENROLLMENT RECORD

Half a million bookworms, scattered across the United States from New England to the Golden Gate, are pursuing their studies in a hundred different lines. The 400 per cent increase in summer school attendance during the past 20 years promises to be considerably increased when final enrollment figures for the hot weather session are compiled. Vacation courses, extension classes, field trips and combination recreation camps and schools offer the student a variety of instruction.

SON FOR STOUTS

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stout, Trenton, N. J., are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son in Dr. Wagner's Hospital, two weeks ago. Mrs. Stout will be remembered as Miss Helen Nichols. Mrs. Stout and baby are paying a few weeks' visit to Mrs. Stout's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Nichols, 116 Wood street.

HELPFUL HINTS

Apples Must Breathe

Yes, apples must breathe! Apples breathe oxygen and give off carbon dioxide just as animals do. But this process destroys the fruit, if continued too long.

Keeping the apple at a low temperature slows up the life processes and holds the fruit in good condition. Bringing it into a warm room speeds up the chemical and physical changes. This explains the necessity of storing the fruit where the temperature is low and even, and bringnig it out when ready for use, rather than treating the eye by piling rosy apples in a bowl in a warm room.

Apples taken from storage should be carefully handled and kept at a low temperature.

New Jelly Bonnets

The practical housekeeper who likes to use paraffin again, after opening a jar of jelly, will welcome the new round covers for jelly jars.

The bonnets come in bright colors and not only are cut to fit, but they have elastic bands to match. The gay jar tops come in packets and will cover glasses that have lost their tin tops. They also are attractive for use on gift jars, or might serve as a novel shower gift.

Broccoli Secrets

It is a good idea to soak broccoli in salted water, after the outer leaves and tougher portions of the stalks have been removed.

Tie the stalks in a bunch, as for asparagus. Stand them upright in salted water an inch or so deep, cover and cook until both stalks and heads are tender. The time for cooking broccoli varies with the quality, meaning both age and the period it has stood after picking. Twenty to twenty-five minutes may be sufficient.

Spend 25c and get dollars in return. Try The Courier classified way.

WOMEN OF THE MOOSE HOLD MEETING; HAVE SPECIAL SELECTIONS

The Women of the Moose, Bristol Chapter No. 763, held a meeting last evening in the Moose Home, Radcliffe street.

Musical selections were rendered by Miss Toudy, official pianist of the lodge. Dance selections were given by Miss Gloria Greco, accompanied by Miss Sara Granzow.

PEACH SHORTCAKE

Two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons sugar, six tablespoons shortening, three-fourths cup milk; Peaches, sweetened to taste, one-half pint whipping cream, one and one-half tablespoons powdered sugar, one-half teaspoon vanilla.

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Cut in the shortening to the texture of coarse meal. Add the liquid to form a soft dough. Turn on board and knead gently for a few minutes. Roll out one-fourth inch thick. Cut with medium or large-sized biscuit cutter. Brush half the biscuits with melted butter and cover with remaining half. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees F. 12 to 15 minutes. Split and fill with sliced peaches, sweetened to taste.

Whip cream with powdered sugar and vanilla. Garnish shortcakes and serve. If desired, roll the dough one-half inch thick and bake, as directed, in one piece. Split and fill as above.

ONE-LEGGED CLIMBERS

PORTLAND, Ore. — (INS) — Slopes of Mount Hood were conquered recently by two one-legged men, John Hennen and John Davidson, who succeeded in their determination to reach the top of the 12,000 foot peak despite their handicap.

The men made the climb in 7½ hours from Timberline road, considered excellent time by their guides.

Fiery Itching Skin Gets Quick Relief

Simple Home Treatment Prove it At Small Cost

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to stop the itching and torture of Eczema, Itching Toes, or Foot Rashes and other externally caused skin eruptions and that is to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning and people who suffer from embarrassing or unsightly skin troubles would be wise to try it.

Ask Pal Mar Cut Rate Drug or any first-class druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and refuse to accept anything else. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that a small bottle lasts a long time and furthermore if this clean, powerful, penetrating oil that promotes healing fails to give you full and complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded. LANDRETH TEAM GIVEN FAVORABLE PUBLICITY

Landreth Seeds are receiving all kinds of favorable publicity and are well thought of in the many towns where they are playing ball, this season.

In one newspaper of Montgomery County the following advance story was published concerning the game scheduled last night at Lansdale:

Manager Dave Landreth has gathered together a group of hustling pastime performers at Bristol who are rapidly becoming one of the outstanding attractions in Eastern Pennsylvania. The Farmers, as they are called, are fast and clever and every inch as good, if not better, than any team that has played here so far in this campaign.

Landreth boasts a powerful club and points proudly to the convincing 6 to 3 triumph it scored two weeks ago over the Bolden Stars, of Philadelphia, a team which upset the Hawks last week.

That is not the only convincing point that Skipper Landreth points to. His club plays in the neighborhood of eighty games every season, meeting the outstanding teams in both Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The Bristolites hold triumphs over such teams as Wissinoming, Port Richmond, Bacharach Giants, Holmesburg, Vineland, R. D. Wood, Riverside, Riverton and others.

True, the club does not show an unbeaten season, having dropped close decisions to the famed House of David, Allentown (present leaders of the Eastern Penn Loop), Cape May and North City Legion.

Turner Ashby, Dutch Henry, Al Carey and Howie Black form a capable hurling ensemble, all of whom are powerful while in action. It was Ashby who set down the Bolden Stars with six hits and also stopped Wissinoming.

Black, who hails from Hulmeville, has also been a consistent winner, having won several convincing triumphs. Henry, a southpaw formerly with Wentz Olney, stopped the Bacharach Giants and Riverton.

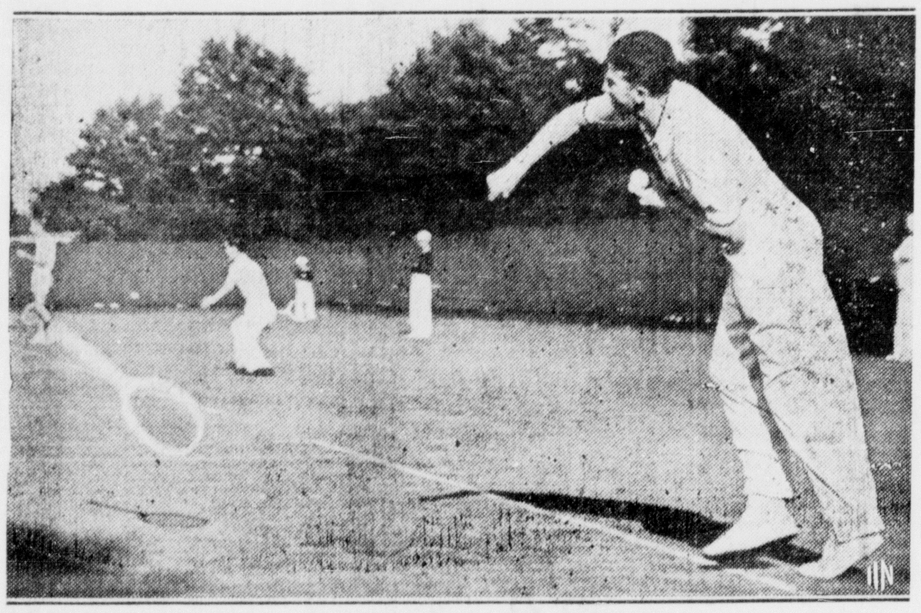
The rest of the lineup is composed of stars. Jack Broderick, who does the receiving, was a flash with the Farmers when he joined them a year ago. Gige Dougherty, hot corner coverer, is a noted hitter besides a star fielder. It was his home run shot with two on that upset the Philly Stars.

Eddie Liberatore, who holds down the keystone, is a product of the minors and lives in Baltimore. Vic Rockhill, a sure fielder, has a habit of getting on base and for that reason leads off in the batting attack. He was with Jeanette, in the Penn State loop, last year.

Claude Lodge, former Ursinus football and baseball star, is stationed in left, while Bill Harwi, of Penn A. C. fame, holds down the other garden patch. Griggs, at first, is one of the ablest hitters on the team.

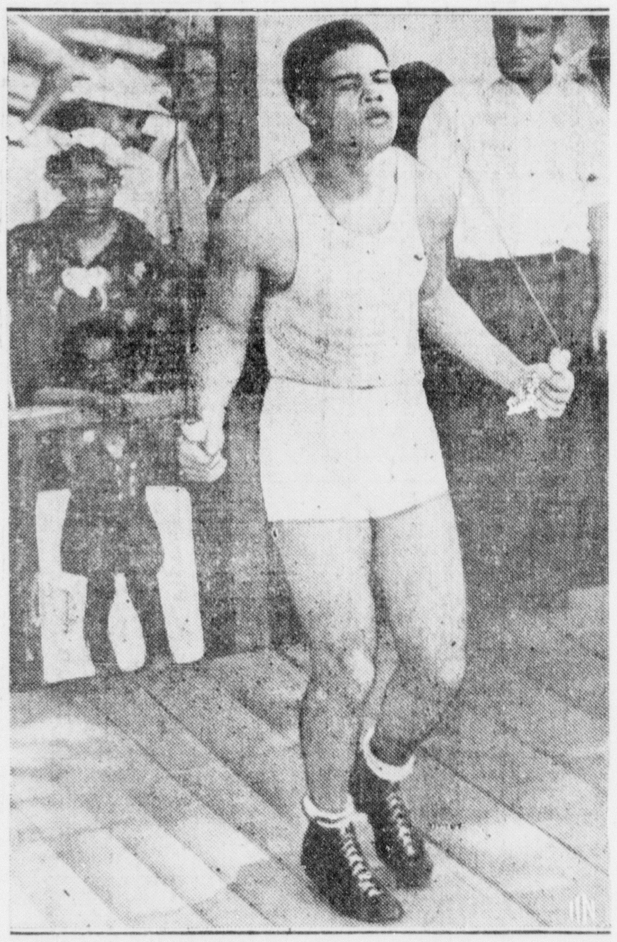
With this sound club coming here, Lansdale will certainly have its hands full. Bolden proved more than a Tartar last week and Landreth holds a decision over them. Think it out for yourself.

Budge Loses His Racquet—But That's All He Lost



His stroke too powerful even for himself, Donald Budge of California, U. S. Davis Cupper, loses his racquet during doubles competition in the Eastern grass courts tennis championships at Rye, N. Y. Budge, known as one of the mightiest of tennis strokers, was teamed with Frankie Parker of Milwaukee, Wisc., against John Van Ryn of Austin, Texas, and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, Ga

Tuning Up His Timing



Joe Louis who, according to his mentors, is in the best shape of his skyrocket career for coming bout with Tommy Farr, British heavyweight, tapers off his workout with a couple of rounds at skipping rope. Notice the young, but very absorbed colored gent in the background, awed by the proximity of the heavyweight champion's presence.

THIRD WARDERS FALTER AND SCORE ENDS IN TIE

By George Brown

After playing brilliant baseball for five innings, the Third Warders faltered in the sixth, enabling the Odd Fellows to eke out a 3-3 tie, Tuesday evening, at Landreth's field.

Entering the sixth inning, the Warders were enjoying a 3-2 lead, but the "Oddies'" bats collected three of their six hits and a walk to produce the tying run. Johnnie Dick opened the inning with a single but was out on an attempt to steal. Vansant to Grimes. G. Ritter then also singled and was advanced by a walk to Jake Praul; Dewsnap flied to center, but Andy came through with a double to left, scoring the tying run.

"Farrot" Dick pitched scintillating ball for the Warders and certainly deserved a better fate. He fanned five batters and walked but two Oddies. The Odd Fellows looked far from champions against the Warders, who completely outplayed them throughout the game.

The leading stickers for the night were "Jake" Praul, who had a double and single for two trips to the platter, and "Ed" Jefferies, who had two singles out of three trips.

Outstanding features of the game were the fielding of "Reds" Gallagher in center and the teamwork of Vanzant and Grimes in nailing would-be baseStealers.

The Third Warders would like to arrange for ball games with other Bristol teams, particularly Bristol A. A. Games may be secured by getting in touch with Manager John Dougherty or Coach Marvin Hutchinson.

BILL EVERINGHAM WILL PITCH FOR LANDRETH IX

Tonight at 6.15 at Landreth Ball Park the Farmers will have as their opponents the Philadelphia Jewish Stars.

Every year Landreth plays a game with the Jewish Stars and they have been heretofore very close contests.

The Stars this year have won a number of games from the leading clubs in and about Philadelphia.

Paul Barrett, last year's captain for the "Landreth Seeds" will make his debut in the game here tonight.

The twilight season is getting short so it will not be possible to play many more evening games, so it is, therefore, hoped that a good crowd will turn out this evening.

Last night the game under the lights with the Lansdale Night Hawks was called off on account of rain. It will be played off at Lansdale in two weeks.

Bill Everingham will pitch tonight.

GAME CALLED OFF

The baseball game scheduled for tonight between Grundy's nine and the Odd Fellows has been called off.

ST. ANN'S TO PUT TICKETS ON SALE HERE TONIGHT

Tickets for the amateur boxing show to be conducted Monday night in the St. Ann's outdoor arena, Wood and Franklin streets, will go on sale tonight, according to an announcement made by the St. Ann's athletic committee.

The banner crowd of the season is expected at the show which will feature members of the boxing team of the American Legion Post, No. 308, Willow Grove. Matchmaker Sammy Moffo is now working for opponents for the Legion boxers.
